Aims and Scope:

In this series of Everyday Cases in Nephrology we take a look at some of the interesting cases that we, as Nephrologists get to see during our routine work in this mainly tropical region, the Indian Subcontinent. The cases vary from the very rare Prallethrin poisoning in a child, to the not so uncommon urosepsis presenting as limb pain in a dialysis patient. There are learning points with each case and this will be brought out in the discussion. Each case opens a trail of thought that is unique, but once embedded in the mind, helps it to hopefully “see” more clearly, the next similar case that comes along.

Key Words: Nephrology, AKI, CKD, Pigment Nephropathy, DAH, Prallethrin, Myositis

Subtopics:

The cases that will be discussed are as follows:

1. A patient with multiple hornet stings and AKI. (Nabin Basnet et al)

2. Double whammy - Pigment nephropathy and warfarin related nephropathy in a patient with a mechanical heart valve. (Arvind C et al)

3. A case of Urosepsis masquerading as limb pain in a patient on chronic haemodialysis. (Anupama YJ et al)

4. A case of Lymphoma masquerading as Myositis. (Manisha Dassi et al)

5. Post transplant patient presenting with proteinuria, hematuria & graft dysfunction. (Mahesha Vankalakunti et al)

6. A case of Sjogren’s Syndrome and Chronic kidney Disease presenting as Diffuse Alveolar Haemorrhage - A Diagnostic Dilemma. (Garima Aggarwal et al)

7. Prallethrin (mosquito repellant liquid) poisoning in a child as etiology for AKI. (Raghunath CN et al)
